Kennedy, formerly of Putnam, who has been in that city for several months, by members of the Loyal Order of Moose, the organization of which he is the national director and in the interest of which he has been working in Portland.

He said goodbye to the city and his friends at a meeting of Dirigo lodge last Friday evening. This lodge being one of a number which he has brought into existence in that vicinity and which he gave a membership of $50 during a stay of eight months there.

The paper states that it was chiefly through Mr. Kennedy's efforts that the order established itself in Maine, and during his stay in Portland he has made hosts of friends.

That his efforts were appreciated was made evident by the presentation to him by members of the order of a gold-handled umbrella properly inscribed and the unanimous passing of resolutions which expressed the high regard of the Moose for him.

Mr. Kennedy has made a remarkable success as national director of the Moore organization. He has worked in many states of the union and the culmination of his efforts is represented by many thousands of members from coast to coast.

STOLEN STALLION RECOVERED.

Edge On, Value $2,500. Owned in Woonsocket, Sold for $65 in Woodstock.

Edge On, the valuable racing stallion stolen from David A. Warman, the well known Woonsocket horseman and driven from that city into this section has been recovered in East Woodstock and Monday evening the animal was being driven back from Putnam to the Rhode Island city.

In the meantime officials in this section and throughout southern New England are searching for one George McManus, who it is said sold the horse to Byron E. Eddy of East Woodstock.

On, well known to racegoers in this section of the east, was recently purchased by Mr. Warman for $2,500. Mr. Eddy bought him for $65, paying $10 down and agreeing to forward the balance of the money to Providence at the end of the week if the animal proved to be satisfactory.

The horse was stolen from Woonsocket Friday night and immediately upon the discovery of the fact there was a commotion in Woonsocket and wires scattered the information of the theft broadcast throughout this section of the country. Police everywhere were warned to be on the lookout for the valuable animal, which had been driven away in a high-wheeled roadster.

Press despatches Saturday morning also told of the theft and in Putnam a watch was kept for the stallion, for he is a fine animal and could easily be identified.

It has since developed that the horse was driven through Webster, where two efforts were made to sell him, and then over into Woodstock, where the chances of detection were not so great on account of the chances that little would be known in that section about the theft.

Deputy Sheriff George F. Holbrook, who became active in the case Monday after Mr. Eddy, who had been press despatches telling of the theft of the horse and became suspicious that he had bought the animal and called Mr. Holbrook's attention to the matter, said Monday afternoon that the McManus, who it is said, worked for Mr. Eddy a number of years ago.

He told a plausible story to Mr. Eddy and the latter, a well known resident of Woodstock, bought the animal conditional upon its being satisfactory, paying the small sum mentioned above and agreeing to pay the balance as specified if the horse proved satisfactory.

McManus walked away from the Edge place after disposing of the horse. It is understood and has not since been seen. He arrived there with the animal about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

On getting the information about the horse from Mr. Eddy, Sheriff Holbrook got busy. Inspector Joseph H. Jalbert of the Woonsocket police arrived here later in the day, went to the Edge place and identified Edge On, which had fully recovered from his long drive from Woonsocket.

The horse arrived here during the afternoon on a roadster to Woonsocket where he was expected to arrive within a few hours.
